Contents
In this module, the possibilities, methods and knowledge goals* of analytical development of composed music are studied. Basic knowledge of both music theory and music history will be tested on selected works or work groups, taking both text-bound music and instrumental compositions into account. Historical composition theory, traditional academic music theory and current music theory discourses will be presented as complementary foundations of musical analysis.
Intended learning outcomes
The student has in-depth knowledge of several methods of musical analysis and has applied an exemplary selection of them. He/she is able to analyse composed music of the European-Western tradition in an appropriate way and to present the results.
